  - egg is broken
  - people are hanging out in there
  - may be a commentary about the frequent visiting of taverns

portraiture

- individual, family, and group identity
- rise of self portraits in the early 1400s
- self-portrait, albrecht durer
  - fully frontal pose with no emotional expression
    - this pose was usually reserved for images of christ
  - possibly he wanted to show the importance of the artist as a creator
  - o lots and lots of detail
  - he wanted to show off
  - included a monogram
- the money changer and his wife, quenten massys
  - o occupational portrait
    - not specific people, just people doing their jobs
  - o a middle class couple sits at a table
  - the husband sits counting money, weighing it with a scale
  - the wife flips through a prayer book, but is distracted by the money on the table
  - o small details
    - a tiny mirror showing a man reading on the other side of the room
    - an open door behind the wife, showing two men talking behind the store

the rise of secular art

- engraving
  - a process used for print making where the artist engraves a metal plate, then presses copies of artwork to sell over and over
- great piece of turf, albrecht durer
  - o painting of plants and nature
  - o watercolor on paper
  - o "worm's eye view"
- view of the colloseum from the west, jan gossaert
  - o pen ink over black chalk on paper
  - architectural art
  - o pictures the colloseum in a partially ruined state
  - o pieces are missing, showing how it was constructed
- battle of darius and alexander, albrecht altdorfer
  - landscape painting
  - the landscape is the primary subject instead of the people
  - bird's eye view
  - o there is a battle going on down on the ground
    - darius and alexander are both barely visible in the painting
    - it is hard to make out the individual people
